

Immune support*

What does your baby's immune system do, and why is it important?

Your baby's immune system is their first line of defense in keeping their body healthy. It's made up of different organs, cells, and proteins that work together. Like other parts of your baby's growing body, their immune system is still young—which means it's important to give it support while it grows and develops.

These nutrients can help your baby's immune system grow and develop*:

- Vitamin A: Supports healthy growth of skin, vision, and the immune system*
- Vitamin C: An antioxidant which helps keep skin, the body's defensive barrier, strong*
- Vitamin D: Important for growing strong bones and teeth, and helps the immune system work smoothly*
- Vitamin E: An antioxidant that supports the immune system by protecting cells from oxidative damage*
- Zinc: Helps your baby's immune system do its job*
- Probiotics: Good bacteria that support healthy digestive and immune systems*

Here are some things to consider as your baby's immune system develops:

- Ask visitors to wash their hands
- Keep your baby on a good sleep schedule
- Ensure that your baby is well nourished
- Consider a vitamin or probiotic supplement as needed
- Keep vaccines up to date

Help keep your baby's natural defenses strong.*

For extra immune support, give your baby Immune Support + Vitamins: an excellent source of the immune-supporting vitamins A, C, D, and E.* It also provides zinc, which the body has no way to make on its own.

Our Daily Probiotic Drops deliver 200 million living good bacteria to your baby's gut, to support a healthy immune system.* They also help with occasional gas and may help your baby cry less.*
